ASBYU election results announced

By VICKI OLTROGGE
Universe Staff Writer

Emotions were high last night in the Memorial Lounge when the ASBYU final election results were announced. Coleman/DeMordant and their supporters were ecstatic while Frogley/Fix and company were heavy-hearted.

"We tried our hardest," said Drew Frogley.

The hearts of the students had to go out to Drew Frogley and Marilyn Fix, who ran a good campaign but lost to Jon Coleman and Reed DeMordant for the ASBYU president and vice-president offices by 365 votes.

"It's too bad everybody can't win," said DeMordant. Coleman said there were no hard feelings.

"This is only going to be a temporary satisfaction. The real satisfaction comes when we develop the programs to benefit the entire student body," said Coleman.

Coleman and DeMordant have high expectations for next year.

"It's going to be a presidential year with great changes," said Coleman.

He and DeMordant are sincere about their efforts to serve the students.

"This is the year when student government will reach the students again," said Coleman.

Coleman attributed their success to campaign strategy. He and DeMordant had ten campaign managers and tried to reach the average student.

"We tried to deal with our own campaign - not anyone else's."

There was a higher voter turnout this year than in previous elections - 5,334 total voters participated in the elections.

"I think most of the credit for the high voter turnout and little circus atmosphere goes to the elections committee," said Chris Doughty, ASBYU president.

Coleman/DeMordant received 2,567 votes. Frogley/Fix were close behind with 2,202 votes.

David Callister, who was 261 votes behind in the primaries, pulled ahead of Eric Tanner for the Academics vice-president office.

Brent Baum received 53 percent of the votes for the Athletics office, defeating Jon Webber.

LesMarie Morgan remained the only community service office candidate and became Community Service vice-president elect last night.

Michele Stone will be the new Culture office vice-president. Stone defeated Rob Burke by 802 votes.

Evan Hoover defeated Jenna Croft to become the Finance vice-president elect. Hoover had 57 percent of the votes.

The new Organizations vice-president will be Wicky Clawson, who defeated Rich Mickel by 869 votes.

"This is only going to be a temporary satisfaction. The real satisfaction comes when we develop the programs to benefit the entire student body."

ASBYU Pres. elect

Shelli Hill, who was ahead of Keith Cornia for Social vice-president in the primaries, withdrew from the race yesterday morning.

Kate Gibson received 2,321 votes for the Women's vice-president office, defeating Pauline Fife who received 2,062 votes.

The number of votes received by write-in candidates was 155 votes.

Brent Everett received 55 write-in votes for the ASBYU presidential office.

ASBYU election winners receive congratulatory hugs after the results were announced yesterday. The winning margin was only 365 votes.

Beaver family are winners of Ramses II

By DONNA R. KELLY
Universe Staff Writer

A 125 mile drive to Provo was worth it after family from Beaver, Utah was honored yesterday as visitors number 400,000 to Ramses II exhibit.

Oralin Smith had been planning on going to the exhibit for a few weeks. As he walked in the door of the exhibit with his children, ranging in ages from five to 11, he was greeted by the side, then, while surrounded by photographers, reporters and onlookers, they presented with their prizes.

The family received a Ramses poster, catalog, and a year's family membership to the museum. We had known this was going to happen, we had dressed up," Smith said.

The children's grandparents accompanied the family. Five of the children were the Smiths', and the other two were the Frogleys.

Oralin Smith kept saying, "This is really nice." Oralin Smith kept saying, "This is really nice."

They expect an additional 100,000 visitors be-

The family of Mike and Oralin Smith from Beaver, Utah, gather around as they are shown some of the prizes they won when they became the 400,000 visitors to Ramses II. Their awards were given to them by the museum.

The exhibit closes in two weeks. The last day Ramses will be in Provo is April 5.

The number of tickets that needed to be sold for the museum to break even was originally estimated at 400,000. But because more people bought discount tickets than anticipated, the figure is now projected between 450,000 and 475,000.

Norma Collett, of BYU's Public Communications said 485,000 tickets have been sold as of Thursday morning.

Griggs said he especially encourages BYU students to take advantage of the proximity of the exhibit. "We're glad to see as many BYU students coming as there have been," he said. "If we sell out, we will accommodate the students and find ways to get as many as possible."

Senate will vote on balanced budget and additional sponsorship from Senators Paul Simon (D-Ill.) and Dennis DeConcini (D-Ariz.).

"It will take 67 votes to gain the two-thirds majority necessary to pass the Senate. Four years ago it passed with 69 votes. This year it is too close to call," Smith said.

Hatch and the other sponsoring senators will be working during the next four days to gain support from fellow representatives and the American people.

"Senator Hatch will be on several talk shows, including 'Good Morning America' and cable news shows," Smith said. "There are a lot of proponents of the amendment around the country, and we are looking for grassroots support to influence the congressmen."

According to Smith, Hatch is optimistic about the chances of success for the amendment.

"Since the passage of the Gramm-Rudman Act, there has been a renewed concern in controlling deficit spending," Smith said. "Senator Hatch feels this is a workable solution."

While amendment sponsors are thinking positively, they also recognize that there are several hurdles left to cross.

"An amendment to the Constitution is always a challenge because in addition to the required two-thirds majority of both houses, it must also have the support of three-quarters of the state legislatures. But if we can get it through congress, we don't think that will be a problem," Smith said.

Passage in the Democratically controlled house is still a matter of concern.

"The difference this time is that we do have bipartisan support in the House as well, but we can't expect to have everything in place until 1990-91," Smith said.

Reagan's accusations unraveling

LINGTON (AP) — Some of the accusations that Reagan made against Nicaragua's leftist army, as he sought to win support for $100 million in aid for anti-government Contra rebels, are unraveling.

The Brazilian government is seeking an explanation for Reagan's accusation that the army was involved in the killing of a Brazilian journalist in Nicaragua's "outlaw" regime. "There is no way the Brazilians say."

Reagan said "top Nicaraguan government officials" were involved in drug trafficking. The Enforcement Administration said after a review of evidence to support that charge, while, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott

Abrams acknowledged to Congress that one group of Contras — although not the main group — also is being investigated for drug smuggling activity.

Reagan said past American efforts to negotiate with the Sandinistas had been rebuffed. The Nicaraguans, other Latin American countries, many American churches and a large number of members of Congress say the administration never negotiated seriously. Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., says the Reagan administration broke off the talks.

Reagan denounced the Sandinistas' treatment of the Catholic church in Nicaragua, but the organization representing all 300 American Catholic bishops wrote members of Congress the next day opposing aid to the Contras.

Reagan charged that the Sandinistas had persecuted Nicaraguan Jews and desecrated a synagogue. But two American Jewish leaders say the synagogue is unused because most of the small number of Jews who were in Nicaragua before the 1979 Sandinista revolution have left.

Rabbi Balfour Brickner of the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue in New York, who went to Nicaragua on a fact-finding mission in 1984, said most of Nicaragua's handful of pre-revolution Jews had fled to the United States, and left of their own accord.

Contra aid loss gets mixed reaction to military aid to Nicaraguans, an especially volatile campus this past week, reacted with a mixture of shock and disappointment.

By JIM COLLIER

John, chairman of the Spanish language department said he is disappointed that the aid proposal was defeated. "I was not sure when I heard the news, but I think it's a good thing," he said. "The Contras don't have a chance of winning any aid, and if they do, it is going to be that much less."

He does not think the United States has any right to interfere in the running of another country. "We can't just stop communism wherever we see it," he said. "We lose more friends that way in the long run. Many Nicaraguans are happier under the Sandinistas."

David Ostvig, a sophomore from Minneapolis, Minn., majoring in business management, is sorry the aid proposal was not passed. "I think that now the Contras are not going to have as much confidence in the U.S. at all. Now the Sandinistas will have no problem keeping the Contras down."

Ostvig said he fears that, given the military aid from the Soviets, the Sandinista government will build a military base in Nicaragua and give the Russians a jumping-off point very near the United States.

Lyon said this fear is "absurd." "Russia has been controlling Cuba for years, and nothing's happened — we won't let it happen," he said. "Besides, Russia can't afford to support the poor Nicaraguan economy."

Although the outcome of the aid proposal was not what Ostvig would have liked to see, he was glad students showed an interest in the problem. He hopes that more students will become involved in similar problems and will want to do something.

David Arrington, a graduate student from Twin Falls, Id., in International Relations, thinks it is better for the United States in the long run not to support the Contras.

"I think morally, supporting the Contras puts us in a weak position," he said. "The Contras are made up of many members of the National Guard, who were part of the government overthrow by the Sandinistas. The people are afraid of the Contras."

Jack Brown, a professor of Spanish, agreed. "We just can't win in Latin America," he said. "Whatever we do is misinterpreted, and just so, especially because of our record in the past, particularly in Central America and especially in Nicaragua."

Brown said he'd like to see aid, but he wants to see it go to the right people, the right people. "I don't like the communist regime in Nicaragua, but I've seen where our money has gone in the past, and generally it doesn't go where it should."

"The American people have begun to awaken to the danger emerging on their doorstep," he said. "And one day in the not too distant future that awareness will come home to the House of Representatives."

The vote followed two days of often bitter debate that ended with O'Neill's saying Reagan's plan "takes us further down the road to a situation where our troops will be involved."

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., responded to O'Neill: "Today, you're wrong, you're wrong, you're wrong. . . . A month from now will be too late because the communists are already mobilizing for an offensive."

— Rep. Bob Michel R-Ill.

— House Minority Leader

Lugar said prospects for approval of the aid package might be improved if a commitment Reagan made to the House to put off implementing the assistance program for 90 days were actually incorporated into the legislation seeking authorization of the $100 million in funds.

Order restricts aid

Reagan agreed Wednesday to sign an executive order that would restrict the aid for 90 days and permit all forms of military assistance after that time if he determines that the Nicaraguan government is not negotiating seriously with the rebels. The Sandinistas have repeatedly rejected such talks, charging that the Contra combatants are a creation of the United States.

Congress could block the full military aid after 90 days, but that would require majority votes in both the House and Senate. Reagan could then veto such a move, and it would require a two-thirds majority in each house to override him.

Reagan's proposal would resume direct Contra military aid that was suspended by Congress in 1984 after disclosures that the CIA directed the mining of Nicaragua's harbors. The CIA backed the Contras covertly from 1981 to 1984.

Reagan's aid package covers $70 million for lethal military aid and $30 million in logistical assistance for the Contras. The president has said the Contras army exceeds 20,000 fighters, but other estimates put the numbers at as low as 10,000.

Reagan offered Wednesday to restrict use of the aid to "defensive" anti-aircraft weapons, training and logistics for the first 90 days while pressing for a negotiated settlement. Reagan, however, could drop those

ASBYU submits proposal to restructure Universe

By VICKI OLTROGGE
Universe Staff Writer

The ASBYU attorney general's office has written an extensive proposal which it plans to submit to the President's Council concerning a suggested restructuring of The Daily Universe. Attorney General Mike O'Neill, after hearing that the newspaper was aware of the proposal, said of the 66-page document, "the suggested changes are only being reviewed at the time, everything is tentative. We need more student input and general information."

The purpose of the proposal is to improve "content, dignity, style, news coverage, practical experience for students and credibility" of The Daily Universe.

The proposal, which questions the basic philosophy and structure of the newspaper, is designed to put under the control of a board of operating trustees, who would be directly responsible to the President's Council of the University, which includes President Jeffrey Holland and vice presidents John Stohltz, Jae Ballif, Ron Hyde and H. Hal Viskic.

The board, which would include representatives from the Communications Department, the student body, ASBYU, Student Life, the faculty, the administration and professional journalists, would replace the present publisher of the paper, who is Ralph Barney, chairman of the Communications Department, and would have control over hiring practices and other operations at the newspaper.

Other major recommendations are: that the laboratory function of the newspaper be revised; that professional advisors be hired; that policies be established for daily operations; and that news content become more campus oriented.

The proposal says the laboratory premise of The Daily Universe limits its staff to students from the communications department, a practice which prevents students from other majors like political science, English and economics from writing for the paper.

In reality, there are presently two English majors and an animal science major on the staff. "Any student who is serious about writing for the paper can do so by taking the basic news-writing class, and then enrolling in the reporting class, both of which are required for staff writers," said Mary Alice Campbell, Daily Universe editor.

The proposal also suggests the laboratory function be revised to allow students to work on the paper because of ability, not enrollment in a class.

Campbell said the purpose of the newspaper lab is to give students needed experience covering beats and writing stories in an atmosphere similar to that at commercial papers. Students would have no place to learn news writing skills and gain the ability to work on the paper if only "experienced" students were allowed to write.

O'Neill's proposal suggests that The Daily Universe "employ two full-time advisors to work with the top student staff members to give guidance and help students develop their abilities." The journalism sequence already employs five professional journalists who come in on a rotating, daily basis to assist reporters with their writing and interviewing skills.

"It's such a great idea, somebody's already thought of it and here I am," said Kris Radish, Bureau Chief for The Desert News, who is one of the advisors.

Another suggestion in the proposal is that policies be established to govern daily operations and format of the paper.

"The Universe does have policies. If it didn't there would be no possible way we could produce a daily newspaper," said Campbell. "An incredible amount of organization and work goes into its production."

Finally, the proposal said, "many articles in The Daily Universe are of little interest to the reading audience," and says students want to be more informed about the events on the BYU campus. It says students feel the paper should serve them first.

Their suggestion is that the newspaper become more campus oriented, printing news about the BYU community and ASBYU in particular.

The proposal suggests that a reporter from the paper "continuously monitor each ASBYU office through weekly checks."

"First of all, BYU students are interested in national and local community affairs as well as BYU news," said Campbell. "The whole world should be our campus, rather than the other way around."

She added that reporters are already assigned to every ASBYU office. They are assigned to check in with each vice president at least once a week.

The Daily Universe's news editor, Steve Garhney, estimates that on the average, approximately 60 to 70 percent of the paper's available space is devoted to campus events, as well as local news that affects BYU students.

ASBYU president Chris Doughty said of the proposal, "This is standard procedure for what student government does. Through the issues and concerns office and other vehicles we determine the major student issues. The issues are then addressed by a special task force which makes recommendations for improvement. This is just one of many."

"The Daily Universe is not The New York Times or was it meant to be. It's part of the University's educational system," said Radish. She said that the idea of any government or governmental entity having control over a newspaper is offensive.

New constitution gives all law-making powers

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The draft of a new, interim Philippine constitution would abolish the National Assembly and vest all law-making powers in President Corason Aquino in a democratic revolutionary government, it was disclosed today.

A Cabinet official gave The Associated Press and other reporters copies of the draft constitution today. The official, who dealt with reporters on condition of anonymity, said Aquino wants to "soften some provisions" of the draft so she does not have to call her government "revolutionary."

The official said Aquino planned to announce the new constitution Monday. He did not say why he was releasing the draft today.

It would give Aquino the law-making powers of the National Assembly and would prohibit any court from questioning her authority or the validity of any law she decrees.

constitution that would be put to a popular vote.

The Philippine News Agency quoted Solicitor General Sedfrey Ordóñez as saying Aquino had consulted with him on the draft constitution and that her final proclamation would not use the "revolutionary" word.

Aquino took Feb. 25, the day General Ferdinand Marcos fled the presidential palace under pressure from a civilian rebellion.

Specialists will begin key cleave examination

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Rocket specialists Thursday began examining a 500-pound piece of debris from one of Challenger's booster rockets to determine if it is the section with the joint believed to have caused the shuttle explosion.

The broken 4-by-5-foot part was brought into port along with two larger booster pieces Wednesday night by the salvage ship Stena Workhorse.

Even before the wreckage was unloaded, experts began studying the smaller piece to try to learn if it was part of the left or right booster rocket. Officials said that probably could not be determined until a more thorough examination was made in a hangar.

Engineers of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration believe the Jan. 28 explosion was triggered by a rupture in a joint between the bottom two segments of the right rocket.

Photos taken of the part when it was still on the ocean bottom disclosed that it includes a fitting that is 19 inches from the joint where on the right rocket, films showed a black puff of smoke on liftoff.

Marcos' holdings vast and intricate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Papers brought to the United States last month by deposed Philippines president Ferdinand Marcos detail a widespread U.S. financial empire worth hundreds of millions of dollars that is so intricate it may take months to unravel, congressional sources say.

"He owns or has holdings in a number of things beyond the New York properties," one source said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity and referring to five New York area real estate holdings worth an estimated $350 million.

The House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs tentatively planned today to make public most of the 2,089 documents taken by Marcos to Hawaii when he fled Manila last month after his 20-year reign collapsed.

"I want to make as much of this public as soon as possible," said Rep. Stephen Solari, D-N.Y., chairman of the panel.

Soviet Union accuses U.S. of espionage

MOSCOW (AP) — A Foreign Ministry spokesman on Thursday accused the United States of trying to spy on the Soviet Union when it sent two Navy ships into Soviet waters in the Black Sea last week.

The U.S. Defense Department acknowledged Tuesday that the cruiser USS Yorktown and destroyer USS Caron entered Soviet waters off the Crimean coast on March 13 but said it was "simply an exercise of the right of innocent passage."

However, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vladimir Lomelko said at a news conference Thursday, "This was a clearly provocative passage, and not only a violation of the borders of the Soviet Union but also an attempt to conduct espionage against the Soviet Union."

The Soviet Union sent a formal note of protest to the U.S. Embassy on Tuesday over the incident, saying the ships' movements were "of a demonstrative, defiant nature and pursued clearly provocative aims." However, that note did not accuse the ships of trying to spy.

Moslem cries 'violation' after religious right

DA, Colo. (AP)—A Moslem with cruelty to animals threatening sheep in his back keeping with his religion's procedure says his rights are violated.

He is going to change my religious use of my laws," Shah Wali said he told police.

Year-old native of Afghanistan runs his own restaurant, signment in Arvada Municipality April 11. A court official said the maximum penalty for conviction on the cruelty-to-animals charge is $300.

Aryan, who has lived in the United States for seven years, said he considers the summons he received a violation of religious rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

Police Sgt. Roger Rountree said animal control authorities followed up a March 12 complaint of sheep slaughter. An animal control officer looking over a fence saw three people skinning a dead sheep in the backyard and called police, Rountree said.

Aryan and two relatives were in the yard, where there were three dead sheep and seven live ones, Rountree said.

Aryan told officers his religion dictates that the faithful eat only meat slaughtered in the holy Moslem way. That means facing the animal toward Mecca, slitting its throat, holding it while it bleeds out — which takes 1 to 14 minutes — and saying religious words.

Rountree said police told him not to slaughter in his yard any more and to take the live sheep out of the city.

S.B. Huda Bokhari, of Aurora, former president of the Colorado Muslim Society, said accounts of the slaughter method by Aryan and police appear to conform with sacred practice, which "is basically the same" as the kosher method of slaughtering by Orthodox Jews.

Hundreds of farm ralliers cheer Rev. Jesse Jackson

ev. Jesse Jackson, proclaiming "farmers looking for welfare, they're looking for their received a standing ovation Thursday from a gathering of about 500 farmers and others at the family farm.

He told about 500 farmers and others at a "Farmers Organization rally that I find it that this administration is more concerned protecting its corrupt allies than helping American farmers."

He told about 500 farmers and others at a home for American farmers that homes for or Marcos," Jackson said, referring to presidents of Haiti and the Philippines. He spoke from a platform at the South Carolina Guard Armory as the audience, many wore caps bearing the letters "UFO," sat in chairs.

He then, next to a logo for the South Carolina Guard, was a sign reading "It's 1995! Do you where your family farms are?" And along of the platform was a line of plastic cups, containing a wilted tobacco plant.

United Farmers Organization, which has 15 in the two Carolinas, was formed two years ago to work to save family farms.

Group is seeking, among other things, a moratorium on force closures to give financially troubled farmers time to refinance debts. The group also seeks farm prices that allow farmers to recover production costs and production limits based on the need for specific commodities.

"We're average, ordinary farmers who have decided this thing has gone far enough," said Linda Clapp of Pittsboro, N.C., the president of the group.

"The farmer is in a card game where the dealer has marked the deck and holds all the aces up his sleeve."

The group's vice president, George Ammons of Duplin County, N.C., estimated that South Carolina could lose 6,000 family farm this year and North Carolina could lose 10,000.

"We need to look at our elected officials and say we need solutions, not promises," he said.

The rally was punctuated by cheering and song, including one by Carle Thompson, a bearded farmer wearing a UFO hat and strumming a guitar as he sang:

"I called up my senator to ask his advice,
"I'm a farmer, what can I do?
"They said he's in a meeting and can't call you back
"At least until 1992."

Art appreciation learned trait

By DAN MASON
Universe Staff Writer

The ability to view and judge art objectively is not an innate talent with which everyone is born, but rather, one that is cultivated with effort over time.

Speaking at the Flea Market of Ideas Thursday, Arthur R. Bennett, associate professor of humanities, classics and comparative literature, said, "When the lack of understanding of art is corrected, and the meaning behind it is discovered, it opens up the door to the world of visual art."

Visual textbook
Bennett said that the ability to understand art is like reading a visual textbook with the same type of competency involved in reading a literary text. "Visual texts will be around you, in the form of art, taunting you for the rest of your life. Unless you go blind, it will be impossible for you to escape confronting them."

According to Bennett, Americans, in building their value structures, have traditionally relegated a study of art to a very low position in their priorities. "Whenever the issue of art is raised, we have the audacity to speak if we spoke with authority," he said.

Vital to education
"The understanding of art is vital to a good education, and a formal education is vital to an understanding of art," he said.
Bennett said that research has indicated that the average viewing time for a painting in a museum is from six to eight seconds. "We look, primarily, in order to identify, rather than to see," he said.

People not understanding what they are seeing is another serious problem that exists in art today, Bennett said. "We are unable to enter a world that we are not prepared to enter. In frustration, we begin to demean, rather than try to understand, which should be the goal of any educated person."

Emotions expressed
Bennett said that one of the most common problems people have with art is that if it's not traditional or realistic, then they decide it is not good art. He gave examples of how artists, through different forms of art, express intense feelings and emotions that most people never see.

He spoke of the painter Roualt, who would express through his paintings the cries of a man who was suffering to bring it to the attention of others. "Abstract art has taught me much about sunsets, and clouds and snowbanks," he said. "Expressionism can teach you about people and life—its joys and sorrows."

Bennett said, "Since so much of the world is visual, it just seems to me that part of everyone's education should be devoted to understanding the worlds of art. I am glad that we have a general education program on campus that gives you an excuse to take an art history class."

Trainman receives hero honor for plucking toddler from rails

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Conrail trainman John Kohl was given the U.S. Department of Transportation's Heroism Award today for leaning out from a moving locomotive and plucking a 2-year-old girl from the rails last summer.

"You can measure the distance between life and death by the length of his arm. It was an extraordinary action. He had to put his life absolutely at risk, and he did it without even thinking," said John Riley, head of the Federal Railroad Administration. The award is the highest civilian award for heroism given by the Transportation Department. It was last given two years ago, and officials said they could not determine the last time it was given to a trainman.

Kohl, who received a medal and plaque at a brief ceremony, has also been cited by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, a private foundation.

Just do it
"I just reacted. In a situation like that, you don't weigh anything. You just do it. Probably anyone would have done something," Kohl, 42, said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

"There was no time to stop. In a split second or two, we were on top of her. She was petrified. I moved my arm in an upstroke, grabbed her clothes and popped her up in the air out of the way," said Kohl, of Northumberland. The rescue occurred at about 3 p.m. July 27 outside the central Pennsylvania community of Cresson as Kohl's Conrail freight train was making a routine run from the Conway rail yards to Harrisburg.

Jeanne Debaugh, of Cresson, was playing in the middle of the tracks, said Kohl, a Conrail employee for 22 years who was a brakeman at the time.

"It startled me. I said, 'Oh, honey, get off the rail.' From then on, I just reacted," said Kohl. "We put the whole train on emergency, and we were blowing the horn and hollering. She stood up and ran for about 30 feet down the tracks and then sat down on the rail."

Risked his life
With the train bearing down on the girl at 20 to 25 mph, Kohl climbed out of the cab onto the front metal frame, called a snowplow or cow-catcher. He had his right foot on the bottom step of a ladder and clutched a piece of iron with his right hand while he leaned out over the track.

"I spread my left leg out in front of the train and I had my left arm spread out. I swept her out of the way, and she landed on her belly."

The train finally stopped more than 200 feet past where the tot was sitting.

"I ran back and picked her up. She was crying. I wanted to comfort her. After I picked her off the ground and held her, it got to me. I really got nervous."

Children weaker than ten years ago

NEW YORK (AP) — American schoolchildren are in no better shape than they were a decade ago, and in some cases they are significantly weaker, a presidential council on physical fitness reported Thursday.

A survey of 18,857 public school pupils found a continuing "low level of performance" in key areas such as running, jumping, flexibility and strength, the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports reported.

"Those statistics are alarming," George Allen, the council's chairman and former coach of the Washington Redskins, said at a news conference. "The conclusion to me is that America is in last place in physical fitness."

Allen, who called some survey findings "appalling," blamed cutbacks in school physical education programs.

"That would be the key," he said. "That would be the Super Bowl: putting physical education back in the schools."

The survey last year of 6- to 17-year-old boys and girls at 187 schools was the largest of its kind in the United States. Among its findings:

— Forty percent of boys aged 6 to 12 and 70 percent of all the girls could not run a mile in less than 10 minutes.

— Forty-five percent of boys aged 6 to 14 and 55 percent of all the girls could not hold their chin over a raised bar for more than 10 seconds. Allen said, "That is a disgrace."

— Forty percent of boys aged 6 to 15 could not reach beyond their toes while seated on a floor with legs outstretched.

— Girls aged 10, 11, 14 and 16 were "significantly slower" in the 50-yard dash, on average, than in a 1975 survey.

— Improvements in physical progress of girls generally halted at about age 14, except in flexibility. Perhaps because of social pressures, "They get to age 14 and they quit," said Guy G. Reiff, the study director.

Overall, the children's performances were little changed from 1965 and 1975 surveys, and remained better than a 1958 survey's result, the study said.

"Generally kids are doing about the same," said Ash Hayes, executive director of the fitness council. "And for many, that is poor."

The council's report noted that a lack of fitness in youth can lead to lessened "intellectual performance" and health problems later in life.

"There are some major problems in physical fitness among the youth of this country," Allen said. "Many children simply aren't getting the vigorous exercise they need to develop strong and healthy bodies."

He said the United States ranks below at least 18 other countries in youth fitness, and warned, "When you lose in fitness; you lose in health; you lose in leadership; you lose in productivity."

Cougars in NIT third round

BYU to face OSU

By MELANIE MARTIN
Asst. Sports Editor

Although BYU's season ended with a disappointing four losses, things are looking better for the Cougars as they head into the third round of NIT tournament play against the Ohio State Buckeyes tonight.

"I think we played as good as we could possibly play," said Coach Laddell Andersen about Tuesday night's game against Cal-Irvine. "Now we are going to prepare ourselves for the next battle (Ohio State)."

The game will be televised live on KSTU (Channel 20) at 5:30 p.m. Radio coverage will begin at 5 p.m. on KSL Radio (1160).

BYU and Ohio State last met on the basketball court 20 years ago. They have played five games against each other, and Ohio State leads the series 3-2.

The Buckeyes went into the NIT tournament with the worst overall record at 14-14. Coach Eldon Miller says a big reason for his team's victories in the tournament is the play of sophomore Curtis Wilson and freshman Jay Burson.

Ohio State has bounced back from the disappointing regular season by winning its games in the NIT. The wins are keeping Miller's coaching stay alive at Ohio State after 10 seasons. He was fired Feb. 3. BYU has survived two rounds of NIT play by defeating Southern Methodist 67-63 and Cal-Irvine 93-80, both in the Marriott Center. Ohio State won its right to third round play by defeating Ohio University 65-62 and Texas 71-65.

Ohio State had the advantage of knowing it would play the winner of the BYU-Cal-Irvine contest, so the Buckeyes sent two assistants to scout the teams. However, BYU has not had much experience with the Buckeyes.

Andersen said it may not matter much because when they prepare for us we may not do what they have seen.

The Cougars finally seem healthy after about a month. Jeff Chatman had a bout with the flu during the WAC post-season tournament, but seems to have returned after scoring the team high 20 points against Cal-Irvine.

Tournament play seems to agree with 6-10 center Tom Gneiting. He scored 19 points and led the team with 13 boards against the Anteaters. In the first round of the NIT tournament against SMU, Gneiting was high-scoring with 20 points and again led with 12 rebounds.

Senior Richie Webb has been playing like each game is his last, scoring 17 points in Tuesday night's contest and 18 against the SMU last Thursday.

The winner of Friday night's quarter-final game will continue its streak and visit New York City's Madison Square Garden for the NIT final four.

Three teams set for NIT final four; still chance for Y to play Wyoming

Basketball teams from Louisiana Tech, Florida and Wyoming all won quarter-final thrillers Thursday night to advance to the Final four of the National Invitation Tournament.

Louisiana Tech edged Providence 64-63, Florida nipped Southwest Missouri State 54-53 and Wyoming turned back Clemson 62-57 to win tickets to New York, where the NIT's semi-finals and championship will be staged at Madison Square Garden on March 24 and 26.

Brigham Young plays Ohio State Friday night to determine the fourth berth in the championship round.

Maurice Jackson and Robert Godbolt scored Louisiana Tech's last 11 points and the Bulldogs survived a late comeback by Providence.

The Friars had a chance to win when Matt Palazzi got open for a 14-foot jumper from the side. But it fell short with four seconds remaining, and Kelvin Levis got the rebound for the Bulldogs.

Louisiana Tech was led by Jackson's career-high 19 points and Godbolt's 18, primarily on inside power moves.

Florida's Vernon Maxwell scored 22 points, then hit a basket for Providence in the final 19 seconds as the Gators beat off SMS.

Sampson opts to jump instead

By JORDAN COX
Universe Sports Writer

When BYU track coach Clarence Robison first saw Dave Sampson jump, he was only concerned with two things — had he ever had any operations on his knees and what kind of shoes was he wearing to high jump.

After a discouraging first day at BYU on the basketball court, Sampson, a sophomore from Sunnyvale, Calif., chose to go out for the track team since he did it in high school. Sampson, as a senior, had a dream to play major college basketball. However, because of his involvement in student government, he had a poor year which kept the college recruiters away from his door.

"I was student body president my senior year so I was not able to work hard on basketball," Sampson said, "so when the track season got closer, I decided to direct my efforts to the high jump."

As the season progressed, he searched for the proper shoes to jump in, but was unable to find a take off shoe for his right foot.

"Each jumping shoe is different," said Sampson. "One is able to jump off of, while the other is used to hold you on course. I was able to find the correct shoes to jump in, but they were all for the wrong foot. I just decided to use my volleyball shoe and a regular track shoe instead."

With his shoe controversy behind him, his endeavor eventually earned him a sixth place finish in California with a mark of 6-foot-8.

After graduating, two colleges in California were interested in Sampson as a basketball player, but he chose to attend BYU since he had an academic scholarship.

As a freshman, Sampson, with his dream of playing college ball still intact, went out for the team but on the first day of tryouts he played very poorly.

"After the disastrous tryouts, I went straight down to the track office and fortunately the coaches were having a team meeting," explained Sampson. "I talked to Coach Robby (Robison), and he told me to come out to practice so he could see me jump."

On the second day of basketball tryouts Sampson played much better, but the coaches weren't looking at him — consequently, he elected to go out for track.

The day Coach Robison asked about his knees and his shoes, Sampson promptly jumped 6-foot-8 and came very close to clearing 6-foot-11. Immediately afterward, Robison issued Sampson his sweatbands which began his track career as a Cougar.

Since returning from a mission to Ecuador, Sampson has been a point getter for the men's track and field team.

Although he doesn't jump as well in practice as the coaches would like, he was able to place sixth in the WAC Championships in March while at the same time qualify for the NCAAAs with a jump of 7-foot-3½.

At nationals this year, Sampson was among 11 jumpers that qualified, but was unable to place. "I did not do as well as I thought I would," said Sampson. "If I would have cleared 7-foot-2, I would have made All-American status."

His failure in the indoor championships has inspired him to work that much more for success during the outdoor season.

Dave Sampson joined the BYU track team his freshman year and high jumped with two different shoes. He has been a high point scorer for the Cougars.

He realizes, however, that since more schools have outdoor programs the competition will be greater in both the skill level and the number of jumpers.

His skillfulness in the high jump manifested this season has been built upon a solid foundation resulting from his freshman year.

During his freshman year, two high jumpers, Dave Stapleton and Rob Olsen, helped Sampson improve his technique and ability.

"If it weren't for them, I wouldn't be jumping well now," said Sampson. "They helped me because they were good competition. I had to stretch to stay with them."

When the first meet of his freshman season in Pocatello, Idaho rolled around, Sampson was not listed as part of the traveling squad.

Coach Robison told the team members that if anyone wanted to compete at Idaho State, they could do so, but would have to pay for the trip themselves.

Sampson ended up traveling to the meet and jumping a personal best of 6-foot-11. Olsen, in order to win the event, had to jump 7-foot. "Rob finally cleared 7-feet and later told me that he worked very hard to clear the height because he didn't want to get beat by a freshman," explained Sampson.

Sampson was part of the traveling squad from that point on and, by the way, didn't have to pay for the trip.

Cougars win third game in Best of the West tourney

BYU's baseball team ended divisional play Wednesday at the Best in the West Classic by defeating Cal State Fullerton, 13-4.

The Cougars now possess a 3-0 record in the tournament, which has been going on since Monday.

The Cougars' right-handed pitcher Craig Seegmiller came away with the win after he pitched the entire nine innings, allowing only nine hits. Seegmiller now possesses a 2-0 record.

Fullerton pitcher Belanger started the game, but was relieved in the seventh inning by Serrano. Belanger received the loss and is now 3-2.

Both teams came out of the first inning scoreless. However, the Cougars jumped ahead in the second inning by scoring three runs to Fullerton's one. After this inning, BYU never lost the lead.

BYU's offense was dominated by Dave Willes, Carlos, Jeff Brown, Dave McGary Schoonover.

The Cougars took their 13th record into interdivisional Thursday.

BYU faced the Cornhuskers of Nebraska at 11 a.m. on Thursday.

Next week the Cougars will have their 13th appearance in the Annual Riverside Baseball tournament.

Action begins Monday at 11 a.m. on host Cal-State Ry

Another Finnish volleyball player will come to Y

Elaime Michaelis, BYU women's volleyball coach, announced Wednesday that Heli Prepula, the No. 1 junior player in Finland, has signed a letter of intent to play volleyball for the Cougars next fall.

Prepula, a 6-foot-6 hitter from Vaasa, Finland, joins junior college All-American Diane Campbell and freshman Christine Hooper as new members of a Cougar squad that made it to the elite eight in the NCAA tournament before bowing to eventual runner-up Stanford.

Holmgren will leave Cougars to take position with 49ers

The San Francisco 49ers announced Thursday that they have hired BYU Quarterback Coach, Mike Holmgren.

Holmgren told Coach LaVell Edwards that he will leave the Cougars after spring practice. However, his departure leaves another kink to the question of who will be the next Cougar quarterback.

Holmgren came to BYU four years ago from San Francisco State, where he was quarterback coach and offensive coordinator in 1981. A San Francisco native, Holmgren coached high school in the area for 10 years.

"It's been a great four years and it's hard to leave," Holmgren said. "But I grew up in the Bay area and it's a great opportunity to work with Bill Walsh. It's an opportunity I just can't pass up."

Holmgren prepped at Lincoln High in San Francisco where he was all-city, San Francisco Player-of-the-Year and All-Northern California. During a California prep all-star game, he was the starting quarterback, while Jim Plunkett had to play defensive end on the same team.

From 1966-69 he was quarterback at the University of Southern California with the likes of O.J. Simpson, Ron Yary, Clarence Davis and John Vella. He survived several cuts with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1970 and later tried out with the New York Jets.

While at BYU Holmgren coached

BYU track team begins spring outdoor season

Sprouting new hope and enthusiasm that accompany spring, Brigham Young University's track and field team moves outdoors this weekend, traveling south for a meet at the University of Arizona.

While it is too early to get much of a reading on the Cougars' outdoor squad, there seems to be enough carryover talent on the 1986 squad to make them strong preseason contenders in the Western Athletic Conference race. The first test of the season will be at Tucson, where four other teams will be hosted by the Wildcats.

As usual, much of the BYU power is concentrated in the weight events. Soren Tallheim, the Swedish shot putter, is closing in on the 70-foot mark. Tallheim, who won the 1985 indoor shot put, had to settle for second place in the NCAA outdoor meet last June.

Steve Young and Robbie Bosco to national status and was part of the 1984 national championship staff.

While under the direction of Holmgren, Young set BYU records for the most passes completed in a season with 306 and the best completion percentage at .713.

He also helped lead Robbie Bosco into the 1985 season never having a varsity loss to his (Bosco's) credit.

"It's been a great four years and it's hard to leave. It's an opportunity I just can't pass up."

To protect you, calls charged to your number will have to meet with your approval.

We want to protect you from fraud or mistake having long distance calls billed to your number. We require verification on all pay phone calls billed to a third number. That means if your number is to be billed, an operator will ask either you or someone your home or business to approve each call when made. If the line is busy or nobody answers, the operator won't complete the call.

If you place a third number call yourself, you have billing alternatives. You can call collect or pay it in coin. The fastest, easiest way, however, is to charge the call to a Mountain Bell Calling Card.

But should someone want to charge a call to you, we'll make sure it meets with your approval. That way, calls you don't want to pay for aren't made at your expense.

Dr. DONALD MARSHALL

Professor's play wins in local drama guild

Takes nine of twelve drama awards

Dr. Donald Marshall, professor of humanities at Brigham Young University, received top honors recently from the Utah Valley Drama Guild for his original play "Rummage Sale."

Nine of the 12 awards annually given by the Drama Guild for semi-professional productions were awarded to Marshall, including Best Production and Best Director.

Marshall played "Jack-of-all-trades" in getting his story onto the stage. He adapted his book by the same title into a play.

In addition, he wrote the music, designed the set and lighting, produced and directed the play. "Rummage Sale" played at the Nelke Experimental Theater in the fall of 1985 after the production premiered in Orem at the Seema Shell.

"The honors are rewarding for me because this is the first time I really tried to mount a full production and direct so much of the process," said Marshall.

Marshall also received honors for Best Original Script, Best Original Music, Best Set Design and Best Lighting. Three of Marshall's performers also received awards. Marvin Payne was named Best Actor; Tracy Alexander, a BYU student, was given Best Supporting Actress honors and Betty Jo Smith received an award for Best Character Actress.

Marshall put long hours and much effort into getting "Rummage Sale" onto the stage. "I've been wiped out from the experience for about eight months but I'm gratified it went so well. I'm particularly pleased with the set design award because it is my first one and with the music award because I play the piano instinctively but have no formal music training."

Marshall, known to his students for his incredible enthusiasm for the subjects he teaches here at BYU, frequently appears to his Humanities classes wearing the garb of the time period he plans to lecture about for example-when he discusses the life and times of William Shakespeare, he comes to class in full Elizabethan dress., has proven himself a great asset to the BYU teaching staff.

Book says feminism hasn't helped

NEW YORK (AP)—Somewhere in the midst of marrying, having four children and a miscarriage, teaching college and working at a think tank, Sylvia Ann Hewlett decided feminism hadn't made life easier for the 1980s woman.

So she added to her workload; she wrote a book. In "A Lesser Life: The Myth of Women's Liberation in America," Hewlett pleads the case of middle-aged women who are divorced and cast adrift without alimony, and of young women who are forced to juggle jobs and children.

She blames an unlikely villain: the feminist movement of the 1960s and 1970s, which she says wasted effort on the Equal Rights Amendment and radical causes while giving short shrift to day care and other family issues.

Hewlett claims to be a feminist, but acknowledges that many women's leaders have been "quite hostile toward the book," published by William Morrow.

Ms. Magazine editor Robin Morgan, for example, named Hewlett's "tediously familiar right-wing anti-feminist accusations..." Hewlett's premise—that the U.S. movement is "anti-motherhood"—is true in terms of fabricated media image but false in terms of reality."

But Hewlett notes the case of a California woman who tried unsuccessfully to return to her bank job two and a half months after giving birth. The woman sued; opposing her suit are the bank—and the National Organization for Women, which argues that women should not receive special treatment.

"Does NOW realize that women are not men? It is true, only women can have babies; it is not the privilege and the responsibility of the female sex," Hewlett writes. "To ignore this biological difference, as many American feminists chose to do, is to commit a double folly."

Children are victimized, she says. If a mother stays home because of a lack of affordable day care, the family's circumstances suffer; more often, both parents are forced to work, and the children are passed along a network of babysitters, friends, and grandparents.

The livelihoods of women also suffer, according to Hewlett.

FLICK FLACK

The Daily Universe, under the title of "Flick Flack," publishes synopses of movies playing in local theaters. Movies listed are not necessarily endorsed by The Daily Universe. Star rating key: *—excellent; —good; —fair; *—poor.

THE COLOR PURPLE *—Whoopie Goldberg stars in this adaptation of Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel. Directed by Steven Spielberg, the movie portrays the physical and emotional struggle of a black woman who eventually comes through the victor. Nominated for 11 Academy Awards, including "Best Picture." PG-13.

GUNG HO —"Mr. Mom's" Michael Keaton returns as funny as ever in this hilarious comedy flick. Keaton stars as a frustrated and concerned citizen who travels to Japan to drum up support for his town's ailing automobile plant. PG-13.

HANNAH AND HER SISTERS *—Written and directed by Woody Allen, this film manages to combine the deepness of a family saga with hilarious comedy. With an all-star cast, this one promises to make you laugh and cry. PG-13.

MURPHY'S ROMANCE —Co-starring Sally Field and James Garner, this old-fashioned romance tells the story of a divorcee who encounters the town's only eligible bachelor. PG-13.

PRETTY IN PINK —Written and produced by John Hughes, this flick co-stars Molly Ringwald and Andrew McCarthy as a modern-day Romeo and Juliet, who come from either side of the tracks. Another "Brat Pack" saga. PG-13.

Put time into work, love speaker tells students

By DONNA R. KELLY
Universe Staff Writer

The 1985 Honors Professor of the Year said he would like to tell students to go out in the world and make love, but was afraid Standards would misunderstand him.

During Wednesday night's Honors Spring Banquet, Dr. Thomas "Ted" Lyon, the Spanish and Portuguese department chairman, explained to his audience of about 125 honors students and professors that time is love, and not money.

"If we were in your final convocation for the College of Business, I might say, 'Now friends, go out there and use your time wisely,'" Lyon said. "Go out there and use the training we've given you. Go out there and make money."

Make what? "But this is not the College of Business, rather some honors, or onerous, group of smart folks. While I might be tempted to say, 'Now go out there and use your time wisely — go out and make love,' I'm a bit afraid you might misinterpret me. Standards would probably get after me, too."

Lyon said America today is a society where success is based primarily on wealth, and thus the phrase, "Time is money."

"But, 'Time is money,' is a thoughtless cliché," he said. "Time is not money because it (time) is irreplaceable; no matter how much money we have, we cannot halt or reverse time. Money is replaceable."

"Time is not money for me, at least, because such a view tends to promote a hurried, hectic, un-fun life for many."

Quality time a fallacy The emphasis on how to spend time should instead be based on love, he said. "I refer here to brotherly love or charity. We truly put our time into that which we love."

Moments especially guilty of spending too much time away from their families, he said. "They imagine that they are supporting their family by working long hours, attending frequent meetings and being constantly on the go."

Lyon said the reasoning behind such motives is faulty. "No amount of material goods, no meetings attended, can compensate for time not spent with loved ones. Gee, that has a vaguely familiar ring," he added.

Lyon also refuted the claim that parents can spend small amounts of "quality time" with their children. "It's hard to program quality time," he said. "We just can't say to our children, 'Come on gang, let's sit down and have some quality time tonight from 7:32 to 7:43.' Children won't go for it, and neither will your parents if that's all the time you give them."

Quoting an article from a recent edition of U.S. News and World Report, Lyon said, "We're much more likely to have our quality moments when we're around our kids more."

Lyon told his audience to not only put their time "to loving use," but to "take and make time for play, for humor, for fun."

"The world is so heavy around us. Lighten it up by spending some time discovering its fun-loving aspects. Smile at God once in a while; tell him a joke."

Oil, Gas and Mining Board receives woman appointee

Judy Lever has been appointed by Governor Norman H. Bangerter to the Board of Oil, Gas and Mining.

Lever is currently Assistant City Attorney for Salt Lake City Corporation. She was formerly a partner in the law firm of Finlison and Finlison and has also been a Trustee for Bankruptcy Court and U.S. District Court.

In addition to her legal practice, Lever served on the Legislative Task Force for Land Use Statutory Revision, was an officer of the Equal Rights Legal Fund, member of the State Bar Committee to prepare uniform probate legislation and in-house counsel for Salt Lake City's Board of Adjustment, Planning and Zoning Commission.

Lever received her law degree from the University of Utah where she served as vice president of the Student Bar Association and was elected to the honorary Bar and Gavel Society. She also completed her undergraduate education at the University of Utah where she graduated Magna Cum Laude in Political Science, served as a student-body officer and was listed in Who's Who Among College Students.

A Utah native, Lever resides in Salt Lake City with her husband, John T. Lever Jr., and their three children.

The seven member Oil, Gas and Mining Board meets monthly and provides direction in oil, gas and mining exploration and development in the state.

Utah Governor selects 13 to energy committee posts

Utah Governor Norman Bangerter has appointed eight new members to the state's Energy Conservation and Development Council.

The council meets regularly to provide coordination of energy resources information, develop projections of future state energy levels and research proposed energy development projects in the state.

The 13 member council includes four legislators, local government officials, people with environmental and consumer interests and five citizens-at-large.

Beginning their three-year terms are Representative John Hollingshaus, State Senator Darrell G. Renstrom, Weber County Commissioner Robert Hunter and William Howell representing the Southeastern Utah Association of Governments.

Other new appointees include Gregory Probst, Co-chairman of the Solar Advisory Committee; Box Elder County civic leader, James Bingham; Pangutuch community leader and former Garfield County Commissioner, George Middleton; and Clara Price, Vernal, representing consumer interests.

State Senator Glade Sowards will continue as council chairman. Also continuing on the council are Representatives Ted D. Lewis, Reed T. Searle, and John (Jack) Redd.

They also provide leadership in state energy conservation planning and promote and coordinate the state's energy policy through the Utah Energy Office.

Y's 'renaissance' professor to give lecture on creativity

ABYU professor recently featured in Utah Holiday as "a true renaissance man," will deliver a public lecture Monday at 7 p.m.

Dr. Donald R. Marshall, popular Utah writer whose play, "The Runnagate Sale" recently won nine trophies in the Utah Valley Drama Guild's Awards night, is recognized for his wide-ranging creativity. Besides writing the play, Marshall directed it and wrote the music and lyrics.

In the speech titled, "Certainly Wouldn't Want to Read a Book that Wasn't True," Marshall will discuss the source of the creative writer's ideas, and how he transforms ideas into prose and poetry.

Marshall bases the title of his lecture on a remark a woman once made when he explained to her that one of his books of fiction recounted events that never occurred. She replied, "Well, I certainly wouldn't want to read a book that wasn't true."

Marshall published several books. His novel, "Zinnie Stokes, Zinnie Stokes," published by Desert Book, has been a regional best-seller since its release last year.

Marshall is also recognized for his Emmy-winning teleplay, "Christmas Shows, Christmas Winds," which is shown annually on PBS. Currently, he is completing a book of interviews with twelve of the world's leading film directors.

The Monday evening lecture, a part of the "Evenings in the Humanities" series coordinated by Dr. Richard H. Cracroft and sponsored by Provo City, will be at the Provo City Council Chambers. Admission is free.

Meatout creates health awareness

By HEIDI CRAIG
Universe Staff Writer

Thursday was the day of passover for thousands of farm animals. It marked the second annual Great American Meatout, during which Americans were asked to eliminate meats from their diets for the day.

The Great American Meatout is sponsored by The Farm Animal Reform Movement, which is a volunteer, non-profit organization.

Sean O'Gara, office manager of the organization, said the goal of the Meatout was to increase public awareness of the mistreatment of animals and the effect eating meat has on the average person. "Six billion animals are killed for food each year."

Never a good day The organization focuses on several goals, the first of which is to increase public awareness of animal welfare. "These animals never have a good day," O'Gara said.

Utah State veterinarian, Dr. Michael Marshall, disagrees with O'Gara on the slaughter of animals. "There are laws, state and federal, governing a humane slaughter. There are inspectors in every slaughter plant to assure that the process is done right."

Another major goal of the group is to increase human health and help world hunger. "We feed most of our crops to animals, and that's protein we could be feeding people," said O'Gara. The group claims that hundreds of thousands of Americans are crippled or die from chronic diseases related to consuming animal fat and meats.

Julie Fredrick, nutrition program coordinator of the Heart Association said, "I don't think you could put a heart disease, but you can't say a person has heart disease if he's on a diet. There are many other factors, like smoking and exercise and family history."

Here in Provo the move toward vegetarianism is in. Greg and Donna Church have been vegetarians for 13 years. They have beespinning vegetarian cooking classes for 13 years.

Norton Dupuis, the 48 year old radio station manager, KHQN in American Fork, and a vegetarian since 1968, the reasons for being a vegetarian differ from person to person. "I'm a vegetarian, for one reason, because it's a much better way to live than killing billions of animals every year. I get from whole grains and bean sources."

Dupuis brags that he can get all the protein he needs in little as 40 cents a day by buying a can of garbanzo

Y rodeo team wants to change stereotype

By ANN MARCHANT
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Rodeo Team wants to change the stereotyped image many people have of rodeo cowboys.

"We're competitors and athletes who come from all walks of life, and we're interested in getting an education," said Blake Nielson, president of the BYU Rodeo Club.

Nielson, a senior from Ephraim, majoring in financial planning, has been rodeoing since he was 15. He is currently student director of the Rocky Mountain Region, which includes all schools in Utah and Southern Idaho that have rodeo teams.

"I had rodeo scholarship offers from all the Utah schools, but I chose to come to BYU, even though rodeo scholarships aren't offered, for academic reasons," Nielson said college rodeo is important because it allows students to be competitive in rodeo while pursuing an education.

College rodeo can also be the impetus that encourages some people to continue their education. It makes it possible to attend college and rodeo at the same time. Shawn Davis, who just completed two terms as president of the 10,000 member Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, said the PRCA wants to promote the image of cowboys as athletes. "They are athletes and they train as such."

Leslie Nelson, a junior from Turlock, Calif., majoring in animal health technology, spends about three hours a day, six days a week rodeoing and training his horse.

"Although we have team members majoring in more traditional things like agriculture, we also have team members in finance and pre-med," Nielson said. "They are athletes and they train as such."

He said he rodeos because he enjoys the atmosphere and competition that it provides. "I like college rodeo because I can be in a rodeo environment at school, and it helps break the monotony of studying."

Feds propose to take over dairy farms

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee's office is being bombarded with questions about the plan to buy-out the dairy farmers.

Known officially as Milk Production Termination, the program was adopted by Congress as part of the 1985 federal farm bill. ASCC Director Ray Lynn Hurst said under the program the federal government will pay dairy farmers to get out of the business.

Farmers must submit bids based on 12 months of milk production. In return, those accepted to the program must agree to stop all milk production for five years, sell their herd for slaughter and make sure the milking facilities they own or lease are not used.

"It's a matter of deciding whether dairy producers would trade their livelihoods for a sum based on 12 months of milk production, and whatever they can get for sending their cows to slaughter," said Hurst.

However, Hurst cautioned, the decision to participate should not be made until all factors are carefully considered. "The decision to sell is second only to getting into the dairy business in the first place," Hurst said.

"The program is not a good option for farmers who are making a profit, or for those who think of the program as a paid vacation and who plan to return to the business once their contract expires."

"The dairy business is likely to be different in five years, and getting back might be difficult. The program is like gambling, in that you know some factors, but you don't know others."

Hurst believes those who would benefit most are dairymen who have made little or no profit in the last five years, those near retirement age or dairymen who no longer have a desire to stay in the business.

The government estimated that about 10 percent of the nation's dairy farmer will participate, but Hurst said most local producers think only about 6 percent will sign up for the program.
